By John L. Sison

THREE senators (Senators Benigno Aquino Jr., Juan Ponce Enrile and Juanito Pardo Lacson) have vowed to fight the proposed increase of the value-added tax (VAT) on power.

The Senate Committee on Finance and Taxation, headed by Senator Juan Pardo Lacson, has approved a bill to increase the VAT on power from 12 to 15 percent.

The bill is expected to be passed by the Senate in the next few days.

World child trafficking now $10-B industry, says Unicef

It rivals trade in illicit drugs, arms

UNICEF warned yesterday that millions of children around the globe are being trafficked annually in an illegal industry worth $10 billion a year, rivaling the trade in illicit drugs and arms.

United Nations Children's Fund Executive Director Carol Bellamy urged lawmakers worldwide to ensure the protection of children by instituting laws that stop their exploitation and abuse.

"Parliamentarians have a choice," Bellamy said at the launch of a handbook to help lawmakers combat child trafficking that coincides with the Inter-Parliamentary Association's annual meeting in Manila, attended by hundreds of legislators from all over the world.

"They can make decisions that ensure the protection of children, or they can make decisions that leave children vulnerable to being exploited and abused," Bellamy said.

She said lawmakers can enact legislation to protect children, allocate funds from national budgets and use the power of parliamentary inquiry to hold governments, industries and civil society accountable.

IPU President Sergio Pérez said ensuring respect for the rights of children "is part of our social responsibility" and calls "not only for the expression of political will, but also for the establishment of institutions, standards and a new international culture."

Bellamy said child trafficking persists because criminal syndicates are behind the illicit trade, tourism is sometimes involved, and victims often are afraid to come forward.

Combating poverty and ensuring that children are in school would help reduce the vulnerability of youngsters from marginalized communities, she added.

There are no exact figures, but a UN government report suggests 50 percent of all trafficked victims are children. Unicef says the trend is on the rise in an industry worth $10 billion a year.

International Labor Organization figures for 2008 estimate 1.8 billion children are employed in the commercial sex industry, while Unicef estimates that child soldiers have been used in more than 30 ongoing or recent armed conflicts in almost every region of the world.

Other forms of trafficking and abuse include girls sold as brides and children sold or stolen for adoption, or recruited to buy for their captors. AP

During the last 100 years, significant changes have taken place in the way that we live. In addition, it should not be forgotten that the world process is changing at a pace that the United States leadership is struggling to understand and keep up with.

It is this rapid pace, these trends that are the key to our future. A thoughtful leader must see the signs and trends in the world and make the necessary changes in our thinking and actions.

Having this awareness is the first step. Next it is to understand the reasons for the trends and to determine if and how we can influence the trends.

It is important to understand the changes and the challenges that we face. It is also important to understand the trends that are shaping our future.

POLITICAL TODAY

It is a sad day for the OFW community in the Philippines as the Pope of the Philippines, Fr. Romeo Roque, has passed away. Fr. Roque was a well-known figure in the OFW community and his death is a great loss. He was a dedicated priest who served the OFW community for many years. His death is a great loss to the OFW community and the Philippines. Fr. Roque was a man of faith and a man of action. He was a man who cared for the OFW community and who was always ready to help them in their time of need. His death is a great loss to the OFW community and the Philippines. Fr. # The question: to act or not to act on something blatantly wrong

THE question of whether to act on something blatantly wrong is a question that has troubled many people for a long time. It is a question that has been asked in many different contexts, from the personal to the political. In the personal context, it might be a question about whether to report a friend's wrongdoing to the authorities. In the political context, it might be a question about whether to support a government that is engaged in human rights abuses.

What problem(s) exist(s) if nothing is done?

One of the main problems that exist if nothing is done is that the wrongdoing will continue. If a government is engaged in human rights abuses and nothing is done to stop it, then the abuses will continue to grow. This is because the government will see that it can get away with its actions and will therefore be encouraged to do more of the same.

What is at stake?

What is at stake is the lives and freedoms of the people who are being abused. If nothing is done to stop the abuses, then the lives and freedoms of the people will be lost. This is because the government will be able to continue to do whatever it wants to do without any consequences. This is a situation that is unacceptable to most people.

What options are there?

Is there anything that can be done?

There are several things that can be done to stop the wrongdoing. One thing that can be done is to put pressure on the government to stop the abuses. This can be done by contacting the government and expressing our concerns. Another thing that can be done is to support the people who are being abused. This can be done by providing them with financial and moral support.

What is the biggest obstacle?

The biggest obstacle is the government's refusal to stop the abuses. The government is determined to continue with its actions and will not be deterred by any external pressure. This is a situation that is very difficult to deal with.

The first step is to identify the problem. In this case, the problem is the government's refusal to stop the abuses. The next step is to determine what can be done to stop the abuses. This involves contacting the government and expressing our concerns. It also involves supporting the people who are being abused.

The diagram illustrates the experimental design. It shows a sequence of three main components: 'Stimulus', 'Response', and 'Feedback'. The 'Stimulus' component involves a subject viewing a face. The 'Response' component involves the subject pressing a button. The 'Feedback' component involves a light or sound signal. The sequence is labeled with 'Stimulus', 'Response', and 'Feedback'.

Trust fun

BY MICHAEL J. HARRIS

It's a good thing that the trust industry is not as boring as it once was. In the past, trust companies were often seen as the domain of the elderly and the wealthy, where the only activity was the safekeeping of money. But now, trust companies are becoming more dynamic and more involved in the lives of their clients. They are offering a wide range of services, from estate planning to asset protection, and they are doing so in a way that is both innovative and efficient. This is a testament to the industry's ability to adapt and grow in a changing market.

The trust industry has long been a cornerstone of the financial services industry, providing a safe and secure way for individuals to manage their assets. In the past, trust companies were often seen as the domain of the elderly and the wealthy, where the only activity was the safekeeping of money. But now, trust companies are becoming more dynamic and more involved in the lives of their clients. They are offering a wide range of services, from estate planning to asset protection, and they are doing so in a way that is both innovative and efficient. They are offering a wide range of services, from estate planning to asset protection, and they are doing so in a way that is both innovative and efficient. This is a testament to the industry's ability to adapt and grow in a changing market.

The trust industry has long been a cornerstone of the financial services industry, providing a safe and secure way for individuals to manage their assets. In the past, trust companies were often seen as the domain of the elderly and the wealthy, where the only activity was the safekeeping of money. But now, trust companies are becoming more dynamic and more involved in the lives of their clients. They are offering a wide range of services, from estate planning to asset protection, and they are doing so in a way that is both innovative and efficient. This is a testament to the industry's ability to adapt and grow in a changing market.
